

Former Chief Of Ordnance Angered By "Pressure"

Washington, July 5 (P)—Major Gen. L. H. Campbell, Jr., testified today he "got red under the collar" over "special pressure" put on him by Rep. May (D-Ky) in the interests of an Illinois munitions maker now under Congressional investigation.

The former chief of army ordnance, bluntly labelled as unfair the activities of May, chairman of the influential House Military committee, on behalf of Henry Garson, the manufacturer.

Campbell testified before the Senate war investigating committee as it resumed hearings on wartime profits of a group of 19 Illinois companies which Chairman Mead (D-NY) has denounced for "war profiteering."

Objected To Insistence

He said that it was "all right" with him when congressmen, cabinet officers, or other officials sent prospective contractors to him, or called his attention to prospective manufacturers of much-needed war material. That occurred on numerous occasions, Campbell said.

Campbell added that it was "perfectly all right" for congressmen to ask for introductions "but when it becomes insistent, that's something else again."

Committee Counsel George Meader inquired whether it was fair to say "that you got hot under the collar" in his conversation with May "because you thought you were being subjected to political pressure."

"Well," said Campbell, "I was talking to a pretty high officer of Congress. I don't think it was fair."

Campbell previously had related that May introduced him by telephone to Garson, described by army officers as "the brains" behind the Illinois munitions combine.

Introduced In 1942

Campbell said that after the introduction Garson came to his office. He said he believed that he had given him a note of introduction to Brig. Gen. Thomas S. Hammond, chief of the Chicago ordnance office.

This occurred, Campbell said, in November, 1942.

Committee Counsel George Meader previously has introduced the transcript of a telephone conversation between May, chairman of the House Military committee, and Campbell. In this May is quoted as asking Campbell to "jump on" Hammond in connection with cancellation of a war contract held by one of the companies in which Garson was interested.

GOP CHAIRMAN PAYS TRIBUTE TO EMANCIPATOR

Tribute was paid to the memory of Abraham Lincoln Thursday afternoon by G. Carroll Reece, chairman of the Republican National Committee, in a short impromptu address made at the Lincoln Speech memorial in the National cemetery after Reece had placed a wreath there.

The national chairman was guest of a group of Gettysburg citizens during the afternoon for a tour of the battlefield while en route to Harrisburg where he delivered an address Thursday night.

He arrived here shortly before 2:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon and was met at the Hotel Gettysburg by a group including Chamber of Commerce President Henry Garvin, Edmund W. Thomas, president of the First National bank; C. A. Wilks, president of the Gettysburg National bank; John H. Basehor, Republican county chairman and other local citizens and officials.

Reece Battlefield
About 2:35 the group moved to the National Cemetery where Reece placed the wreath and then expressed his pleasure at being able to view the scene where Lincoln delivered his immortal address. He then left for a tour of the battlefield.

Chairman Reece is a native of Butler, Tenn. A lawyer and president of the Carter county bank, he is a first World War veteran; won the distinguished service medal and cross and purple heart.

In his address Thursday night at Harrisburg he charged that President Truman "gambled the whole economic structure of the nation in voting the OPA extension bill," according to the Associated Press.

"Within the past week we have seen how far an entrenched bureaucracy will go in efforts to perpetuate its powers," he declared, adding: "We had the even more humiliating spectacle of a public brawl between members of the highest court in the land, the Supreme Court of the United States. This humiliating display was the logical result of attempts to convert the Supreme Court into a subservient and partisan political tool of the administration in power."

"If we elect the right kind of a congress this year we can stop the drift toward disregard for the rights of individuals."

Reece asserted many of the warnings of inflation "have come from the very persons who have helped make inflation inevitable," commenting:

"For the past 14 years the government of the U.S. has spent billions of dollars more than it took in and it is the main reason why we have progressed a long way toward inflation."

An estimated 15,946 cars visited the field during June, and there were 2,384 guided trips including 106 bus tours. A total of 3,120 persons visited the battlefield in buses.

Last year, during June there were 356 guided tours and 14 bus trips. There was a total of approximately 5,000 visitors during June 1945.

BULLETIN

Thurmont, Md., July 5 (P)—President Truman decided today to visit nearby Gettysburg battlefield tomorrow morning with Mrs. Truman with whom he is spending a long 4th of July weekend in western Maryland.

The two took a 45-mile drive this morning through Waynesboro and Hagerstown. Their auto was accompanied by only one other car containing a small detail of Secret Service men. Residents of the towns recognized the presidential car and waved. The president did not stop.

Charge Follows Truck-Car Crash

An automobile operated by Mrs. Margaret E. Hughes, Miami Beach, Fla., figured in a collision with a truck owned by the Aero Oil company, New Oxford, and driven by Howard J. Hall, New Oxford, at 11 o'clock Thursday morning at Carlisle street and Broadway.

Mrs. Hughes was arrested by borough police on a charge of passing at an intersection, was convicted before Justice of the Peace Robert P. Snyder, and was fined $10 and costs. Damage was estimated at $100.

NO ACCIDENTS REPORTED HERE OVER HOLIDAY

Despite heavy traffic over the Fourth of July, Adams county's roads were free from motor vehicle accidents, according to the local sub-station of the state police. There were no accidents reported to the officers during the period from Wednesday morning until this morning.

One car was stolen when John H. Moore, New Oxford R. 2, reported to the police that his 1941 Buick sedan, license E3029 was taken sometime on the evening of the Fourth while parked, with the keys in the car, at Cross Keys.

T. Omer Myers, Greencastle, was charged by state police before Justice of the Peace Ellis F. Stine, Hamilton township, with parking on the highway. Alfred T. Myers, Hanover, was charged by state police before Justice of the Peace Robert P. Snyder with driving on the left side of the road.

4,500 Visit Field

Traffic over the Gettysburg Battlefield continued high over the Fourth, with Cemetery Superintendent Alvin Baker reporting that an estimated 4,500 persons visited the field Thursday. There were 162 guided tours during the period.

Last year on the Fourth there were 44 guided trips and an estimated 1,232 visitors. On July 4, 1941, last big tourist year before the war halted traffic, there were 204 guided trips in cars and two buses. Total estimated visitation on that date was 5,766.

June this year fell below the 1941 totals for the same month, according to figures released today by the National Park office, but the visitation was nearly ten times greater than the tourist traffic of last year.

68,066 In June

Last month there were 68,066 visitors to the National Park, largest number since 1941.

An estimated 15,946 cars visited the field during June, and there were 2,384 guided trips including 106 bus tours. A total of 3,120 persons visited the battlefield in buses.

Last year, during June there were 356 guided tours and 14 bus trips. There was a total of approximately 5,000 visitors during June 1945.

The photograph below shows the progress made thus far in the construction of the Inductive Equipment Corporation's new factory at Quarry Park (formerly the old brick yard). The factory is expected to be completed for occupancy in the early future.

WILL COMPLETE CANNING PEAS THIS WEEKEND

Work on canning "a pretty good" pea crop was scheduled for completion this week by the two canning factories at Littlestown.

Despite hardships in the matter of labor during the canning period the Littlestown and B. F. Shriner company canneries were able to get the crop canned in good order.

Hardest hit was the Littlestown Canning company where a large number of farmers came in to work. When the weather broke permitting them to return to the farms for full-time work, they had to leave employment thus forcing the company to go shorthanded during several days. Many clerks and others in the community answered the demand for emergency help and assisted in getting the crop canned.

Some Good Yields

Quite a number of the farmers obtained two tons per acre from their pea fields, Melvin B. Wehler of the Littlestown Canning company reported. Best yield for the fields so far has been 2 1/2 tons. Some of the fields that lay fairly low were damaged by rains and gave only about one ton per acre.

The Littlestown Canning company was scheduled to start on early beans but it was expected that not before the first of August will that company be able to start canning beans in any quantity.

Because of the frequent rains during the regular planting season many farmers did not get their beans in until the past several weeks. Some of the farms are planting beans in the recently harvested pea fields.

Officials of the B. F. Shriner company could not be reached to determine what effect the late planting season and recent bad weather through the month of May may have on their canning plans.

4-H BOYS MAY GO TO STATE MEET

Adams county 4-H boys may take part in the state 4-H meeting at State College in August, if enough interest can be worked up here and parents of the boys decide they can spare them from farm work, Ira N. Dunmore, assistant county farm agent, said.

The matter was discussed at a meeting of the Adams County Baby Beef club at the home of Harvey Walton, McSherrystown. Tuesday night, Mr. Dunmore said. The boys who attend the state 4-H meeting will have the opportunity of making several tours, will gain much valuable information, and will compete in various events, including a cattle-judging contest, he added.

The winning county livestock judging team at this state meeting will go to Chicago in November to compete at the National Livestock show," Mr. Dunmore said.

The meeting at McSherrystown Tuesday was a "practice" session for any boys who may be able to go to State College. A part of the program was given over to guessing the weights of two steers on the Walton farm. A talk was also given on the origin of various beef cattle breeds.

They are nephew and niece of the late Mr. and Mrs. David Lawyer, Gettysburg. They were accompanied here by Mrs. Alice Schlosser, Shepherdstown, who had been their guest for some time.

Suddenly Russia agreed that the Dodecanese islands should be returned to Greece, that the British should take the colonies under a kind of mandate pending final settlement, that Trieste should remain under the United Nations for a time. An agreement on control of the Danube seems to be approaching.

Not Results of Threats In return, Russia got the reparations she had been demanding from Italy, but conceded that payment should not start for two years.

That the result is a Jerrybuilt house none can deny. The 21-nations which will meet July 29 to ratify the various treaties which the foreign ministers have negotiated will find themselves working on "stopgap legislation." But the mere fact that the ministers have agreed on anything at all marks a tremendous stride. Three weeks ago it looked very much like they would split up, throwing the whole problem into the lap of the United Nations. Byrnes threatened to do so if an agreement was not reached, and Bevin concurred.

But more important than the results are the indications that western threats were not primarily responsible. There is evidence, cited in this column previously, that Moscow decided before June 15 that an accord with the United States was more important than any or all of the gains for which she had been holding out.

LEADERS SPLIT; BENDERSVILLE, ORRTANNA LOSE

Fairfield divided a double-header while Emmitsburg and McSherrystown copped twin bills in July 4th games played Thursday in the Adams County Baseball league.

Bercaw and Myers divided the pitching for Fairfield in the morning game and held Littlestown to six scattered hits while their team-mates pounded out a 7-0 decision.

In the afternoon game Littlestown gained a 5-4 decision after out-hitting the league leaders 9-7. Both games were played at Fairfield.

McSherrystown took a pair of games from Orrtanna. In the morning game at McSherrystown the score was 7-4 while the afternoon tilt at Orrtanna was 8-4. Felix and Hertz formed the battery for the winners while D. Rebert and J. Wetzel worked for Orrtanna.

Protest Game

Orrtanna got off to a 2-0 lead in the second inning of the afternoon contest by F. Staub's homer with one man on base tied the count in the third. McSherrystown added two runs in the sixth but Orrtanna came back with two in the seventh to again tie the score. The winning battery comprised C. Bevour and Hertz while C. Rebert and J. Wetzel performed for the losers.

Orrtanna protested the afternoon game when the umpire-in-chief called interference on J. Wetzel, catcher, for going in front of the plate to take a throw when the batter was in the box.

Emmitsburg swept both games from Bendersville, gaining a 6-5 decision at Bendersville in the morning and a 3-1 victory in the afternoon game at Emmitsburg.

Two Services Commemorate Battle in 1863: Two services on the battlefield Thursday night, by the Gettysburg volunteer firemen and the Gettysburg camp of the Sons of Veterans, recalled the gloomiest hours of the battle that was fought here 68 years ago.

The first service, that of the firemen, was held in the Bloody Angle off Hancock avenue, the scene of the high water mark of the battle and it commemorated the bravery and courage of the 72nd Pennsylvania volunteers, the fire companies, the ceremony being completed by the placing of a wreath at the monument by Andrew Becker, oldest veteran fireman in the county. Doctor Alleman made the principal address at the ceremony.

The second service, conducted by the Sons of Veterans, was held a few minutes later over the brow of a small ridge at the white-washed clapboard structure which served as General Meade's headquarters during the three-day battle. The Rev. L. B. Hafer in his address eulogized General Meade.

The Ladies of the G. A. R. held services on East Cemetery ridge Friday evening. The Battlefield Guides' association held services on the battlefield Friday night with Dr. G. C. Bassett as the speaker.

Today's Talk

INTERESTING PEOPLE

The average person, if such there be, rarely thinks himself interesting, and so shuts up most of his doors to the outside world—and locks them! Too many folks in this world are self-jailed. They hide behind such things as shyness, a sense of inferiority, and lack of self-confidence. They prefer to be pitied, rather than admired and considered interesting.

Interesting people are those who are genuinely themselves, in thought and expression. They are often quite unconventional in their thoughts and actions, but tolerant as well. You can tie to them as friends, for they have a wealth of understanding. Other people interest them. They are happy to divide their interests, thus enriching others. And they are cheerful minded.

Interesting people do not confine their interests to a single line or track. They branch out. They are intrigued by every new discovery, and are not happy until that discovery is revealed, and advertised to the world. They are imbued with what Emerson called the "Over-soul."

Bob Casey, the brilliant and lovable Chicago News world reporter, wrote a book which he called "You Meet Such Interesting People." Well, that is the job of the reporter for a newspaper, and it is the job of us all, if we would keep abreast, and keep constantly inspired. There is no need for anyone to remain a drone or a bore! The least gifted still may be most interesting. One of the most interesting men I have ever known was almost without any schooling—but he was intelligent, and what I learned from him would take perhaps a lifetime to find in books!

Interested people are always interesting. And so are those who have travelled much, observed, and stored away their discoveries. People who have contacted many minds have gained impressions and mind-health that simply will not rest hidden. It bubbles out! Thus, in becoming interesting themselves, they stimulate others to come out of their shells and become interesting.

Presenting a new thought, in newly tailored words, is like pointing out the path to the one in the woods who has invented a better mouse-trap! Interesting people are always those hunting for new worlds to conquer.

Tomorrow Mr. Adams will talk on the subject: "New Beginnings."

"AS I WAS ADVISED

"When a woman sets her cap,"

Said my Nellie, "for a chap—

Or her bonnet—

He's a goner; sure as fate

She will land him soon or late.

Gamble on it!"

Now I wonder, as I smile,

Are these hats—the latest styles—

Being tilted

Someone masculine to catch

Who would make the perfect match,

If he winks?

Does some clerk who's after sales

Say: "This hat attracts the males?"

Do they tell it

To the lady: "It's a lure

That to hook a man is sure!"

Just to sell it?

"Yes," my Nellie said, "the style

Is for man the surest wile

She can hand him.

When a man she's out to get,

With a ribbon and rosette

She can land him."

South Queen Is Town's Busiest Main Street With Variety Of Establishments

Littlestown's biggest street, when it comes to the number of business places at least, is South Queen, one-time Baltimore street.

Since the days in 1814 when the first wagons rolled along the cobble surface of the street which was on the Baltimore-Pittsburgh turnpike, South Queen has been a main artery of trade.

Starting with the American store on the east side at the "square" where Charles Riffle has been manager for approximately a quarter of a century, the street presents an almost solid line of business places as far as the railroad.

Next to the American store is J. Richard Harner's restaurant, where the former GI now operates the restaurant that he purchased from Theron Basehor, Sr. Harner bought the establishment before the war, after selling a restaurant on Newark street to George Kress.

Both Banks on South Queen

Marvin F. Breighner, a recently discharged GI who bought the store from William J. Yingling recently.

Breighner has over 40 months of service in the army including 14 months overseas. He was a former employee at the Yingling store from 1939 until his enlistment November 30, 1942.

Above Marvin's store is the J. M. Feerer printing establishment, another landmark in the community.

Littlestown's two banking establishments are located on South Queen street, with the Littlestown National bank on the east side of the street and the Littlestown State bank on the west side slightly to the south of the National bank.

Next to the Littlestown National is the R. J. Stonesifer pool room managed by Robert Klindestin and next is Dr. Howard A. Stonesifer's drug store which for about a quarter century has been a landmark on the street.

Another new establishment on South Queen is the J. M. Stonesifer's recreation hall occupies the rear of the store structure and the VFW holds its meetings at present in the hall.

Dr. Arthur Richards, a graduate of Gettysburg college with the class of 1939, has his office next to Hollinger's. He established his practice at Littlestown about three years ago.

Next is one of the best known establishments in Littlestown, Schott's restaurant, where Bernard Schott has taken over the business established by his father.

Another Vet's Business

On the west side of South Queen is J. Edgar Yealy's five and ten cent store where the town council member has one of the town's largest businesses.

Shops And Restaurants

Samuel Highbotham, formerly of New Oxford, operates a jewelry shop on South Queen street, and finds that the watch repair business is continuing at an all time high.

Karl P. Bankert's restaurant on South Queen has become famous during the past five or six years for the quality of its ice cream which is "homemade" at the Bankert establishment. Owner Bankert however points out that the restaurant should be famous for its ice cream because that is how it began, as an ice cream establishment, and the restaurant part was added later.

Bankert is almost as well known as a sportsman addicted to hunting and fishing as he is as a restauranteur. Among other things he is a past president of the Littlestown Fish and Game association, he continues active in the organization.

C. E. "White" Schroll is one of the few electricians anywhere with a blue jeep to drive around. The jeep is a familiar sight beside "White's" Electrical shop on South Queen.

Zerfing's hardware store is one of the newer establishments in Littlestown but has already become one of the leading stores in the community. However, while the Zerfing store is new, the site has been used for a long time by a hardware store with the Basehor establishment there before George M. Zerfing bought out the business more than a year ago.

Ralph Staley's barber shop is another landmark on South Queen although at one time it was on the west side of the street, rather than the east as now.

W. H. Dern's clothing store is next followed by Renner Brothers hardware store in the Central tavern block. Samuel E. and Roy D. Renner own the store and the building. They conduct a successful general hardware business and sale of appliances, with a large warehouse houses south of the railroad tracks but there are several places of business between the railroad and the south borough line. First place south of the railroad on the east side is the Farmers' Feed store, operated by Lee B. Fromeyer. Mr. Fromeyer also has a store in Bonneauville.

J. W. Brendle conducts a large business in selling pigeons for trap shoots and is a dealer in small animals.

East of Queen street and back of the Brendle place is the large brick building of the Littlestown

Throwing company, a thriving business which employs about 60 persons and daily turns out miles of silks thread, from raw silk obtained from China, Brazil, Italy and Japan. Thomas Staley, who has been

JOURNALIST IN BERLIN WRITES OF HIS NATION

(Hal Boyle begins today a series of columns written by representative Germans, presenting their own uncensored views of their nation's life and future. The writers' anonymity is preserved in order to make possible the utmost honesty and frankness of expression. The series is planned with the intent of providing a cross-section of German thought. This, the first of the series, was written by a Berlin journalist.)

Berlin, July 5 (AP)—The number one problem faced by a German newspaperman these days is the entirely new political structure of Germany caused by the loss of the war and the occupation of the country.

He must think in foreign and local policy at the same time. The entirely different ideas of democracy which the four great powers represent give no basis for the necessary reeducation of our people to become real democrats. This leads Germans to take sides as to the occupying power they like or dislike.

What other consequences may result from this tendency of the Germans toward one or the other great power cannot be decided yet.

The Russians have made more progress in their propaganda than the other allies. As an example, questions like the food situation and the question of supporting Germany with food imports—where the U.S.A. is undoubtedly leading—are still not clear in the mind of the German people.

Americans May Lose

Problem number two for the German newspaperman is the general attitude of the Western allies. They miss the opposition against the Russian tendency toward total bolshevization.

The lack of allied politicians who might be successful with a well-balanced policy against the strong Russian pressure leads to the conclusion that the Americans will lose the victory they gained in Europe.

Propaganda chances which were very obvious unfortunately haven't been used. Germans are not enough engaged for these tasks. The feeling of suspicion against Germans is still very strong on the American side. It often happens that the Americans even exceed their own strongest denazification laws in considering persons supposed to take over official positions or jobs with military government. In this way the Americans miss those Germans who would have the background for a new policy on re-education.

How Democrats?

Undoubtedly England is the favorite in the feeling of the Germans toward the four occupying powers. The reason is the most correct and straight occupation policy of the British. Here the Germans meet—and it is most important—a sort of human interest in their present problems. This is quite a contrast to the generally cold attitude of the Americans.

We Germans have to look eastward and westward. We have to take a hard way—we are certain of that. But we also know that our efforts will be in vain if a united policy for Germany isn't followed soon.

How can we become democrats if the occupying powers do not live up to a real and clean democracy?

HARVARD GETS PAINTING BACK

Cambridge, Mass., July 5 (AP)—A painting believed to be the "Descent From the Cross," for alleged loss of which Mrs. Jean Bullitt Darlington of West Chester, Pa., sued Harvard university for $100,000, has been returned to Harvard, the Boston Globe said today in a copyrighted story.

The Globe said the painting, which Mrs. Darlington, a relative of William C. Bullitt, former ambassador to Russia, purchased in Antwerp, Belgium, in 1921 in belief it was a Rubens, was turned over to Harvard lawyers by a representative of a man who bought it for $40.

The purchaser, the newspaper added, was not aware of its real value or that it had been the object of a six-year search.

It has been placed in the care of Arthur Pope, acting director of Harvard's Fogg museum, from which it disappeared originally, and is being held until Mrs. Darlington, wife of a naval officer, formally identifies it, the Globe said.

Mrs. Darlington charged in her suit, filed June 18, that the museum gave the painting to a man who misrepresented himself as her agent after she had submitted it to Harvard authorities to determine its validity.

The man who obtained the painting from the museum, the suit detailed, placed it in a Boston gallery and when that went out of business the picture was not accounted for.

FOURTH OF JULY DEATHS NOT UP TO ESTIMATES

COMMITTEE OF SENATE OKAYS REVIVAL OF OPA

(By The Associated Press)

By FRANCIS J. KELLY

The nation celebrated a comparative safe and sane fourth of July holiday yesterday. Fireworks caused some deaths.

The toll of violent deaths, a survey disclosed, was far below the estimate which had been forecast by the National Safety Council for Independence Day and the extended four-day holiday.

The measure, approved 12 to 5 last night by the Senate banking committee, differed in only two major particulars from the one President Truman vetoed last week with the comment that it was an "impossible" piece of legislation.

Taft Declares War

Nevertheless, the changes—both involving profit formulas for manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers—were such that Republican Senator Taft of Ohio declared open war on the revision and announced he would battle it on the Senate floor.

The survey showed at least 145 persons suffered violent deaths, with traffic accidents leading the list of fatalities with 65. At least 42 persons drowned in holiday outings while violent deaths from miscellaneous causes totaled at least 35. On the Fourth of July last year, a Wednesday, 150 persons suffered violent deaths.

Estimated 800 for Week-end

Deaths resulting from explosives were reported in Philadelphia and in Waukesha, Wis. Jean Piccone, 13 year old Philadelphia girl, was killed by a mortar shell fired during a Fourth of July celebration in Fairmount park. In Waukesha, a prankster tossed a big firecracker near George Bucher, 17, who was swimming, and the youth died as a result of ruptured lung caused by the explosion of the firecracker. In Paterson, N. J., Harry McNally, 57, died of a heart attack and the car he was driving careened into four cars in a parking lot after a prankster threw a large firecracker in front of the machine.

The National Safety council estimated 800 immediate deaths for the four-day holiday, with 275 traffic fatalities. They had forecast 75 traffic deaths yesterday.

Ohio had the most deaths over the holiday with 15, including eight traffic fatalities. Pennsylvania had nine deaths—none auto fatalities.

(By The Associated Press)

At least nine persons died in Pennsylvania yesterday (Thursday) as the commonwealth observed its first peacetime Independence Day in five years.

No automobile fatalities were included in the first reports. However, all highways were heavily traveled.

Pennsylvania state police reported peak travel would be reached during the week-end because many of the July Fourth celebrants are taking extended vacations.

GIRL, 13, KILLED

Philadelphia, July 5 (AP)—A sorrowful family completed funeral arrangements today for 13-year old Jean Piccone, killed by a mortar shell during Fourth of July celebration at Fairmount park.

Park guard James Moyle said the child broke through a large crowd toward a restricted area just as a mortar was being fired by the 412th Chemical Warfare company from Edgewood Arsenal, Md.

Lt. Col. Nelson Kaig, commanding officer of the mortar crew, said the soldiers were using service ammunition with a reduced charge. The crowd at the park was so large military police and park guards had difficulty keeping persons from the restricted area. The mortar-firing demonstration was halted after the accident.

Jean's father, Joseph was at Shibe park attending a ball game. He learned of his daughter's death when he was summoned through the Park's Public address system.

Spaghetti originated in China and was introduced in Europe through Italy by Marco Polo.

HOT TIP

Joplin, Mo., (AP)—When an armed bandit entered the Western Union office here, a 21-year-old teleprinter operator, Miss Barbara Adams, sent a call for help out over the wires on her machine.

It was picked up by the Kansas City Western Union Office which relayed it to Kansas City police. The message was flashed back by radio to Joplin police who reached the roundup scene only minutes after the gunman had fled with an undetermined amount of money.

SCRIBE FACES FACTS ABOUT SEN. BILBO

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, July 5 (AP)—Senator Bilbo's re-election in Mississippi.

It's this: Does his racial prejudice represent the thinking of white Mississippians?

He pitched his campaign on "White Supremacy" and told whites to keep Negroes from the polls.

That was all-out racial prejudice. He was elected. This was the third time he's been elected Senator. After his victory he said:

"I made the same fight and have the same convictions that a great majority of southerners have."

Majority Didn't Vote

Did he?

It certainly was the choice of the majority of Mississippians who actually voted. They gave him 97,000 votes to a combined vote of 93,000 for his four opponents. The total vote cast, almost entirely white, was about 190,000.

But—the majority of white Mississippians who voted for him were only a small minority of the 500,000 white people old enough to vote in Mississippi. About 500,000 Mississippi Negroes are old enough to vote but only a handful did so in this election.

The 97,000 votes Bilbo got was 19 $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent of the 500,000 potential white vote. His opponents' 93,000 was 18 $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. So the total vote cast, 190,000, was only 38 per cent of the 500,000 potential vote.

Widely Criticized

(Some of those who stayed away from the voting booths may not have had the money to pay their polltax but the rest probably lacked enough interest in the issues to go to the polls.)

So it would seem Bilbo's racial-prejudice campaign got the results he wanted.

For his prejudice talk during his years in Washington, Bilbo has been criticized by writers and commentators, particularly northerners. When the campaign started, some Mississippi opponents of Bilbo said in effect:

"Mississippians resent the northern attacks on Bilbo. They resent outside intrusion. They resent those toward Bilbo. If the outsiders would lay off, we could handle the situation here and maybe defeat him."

Nation Has Interest

That, to this writer, seems a negative approach. It overlooks, or sidesteps, three main points.

1. The whole country has an interest in any senator, no matter

Spread Threat In Bus Strike Fades

Pittsburgh, July 5 (AP)—Threat of a general sympathy walkout by Pittsburgh district bus drivers and street car motormen, in support of a bus strike faded today as a union official forecast an early settlement of the dispute.

William L. Robinson, international vice president of the AFL-Amalgamated association of street, electric railway and motor coach employees, said the 112 striking drivers of the Beaver Valley Motor Coach Co.

would meet today at New Brighton

two-week-old Beaver Valley bus strike faded today as a union official forecast an early settlement of the dispute.

Everything looks good," Robinson declared, adding that he believed the new offer would be acceptable to the drivers.

If the proposal is approved Robinson said, arrangements can be made to have the mechanics back at their jobs tonight and buses operating again Saturday morning.

WIRE TAPPING CONDEMNATION SPURS INQUIRY

By WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST
Washington, July 5 (P)—Angry congressional criticism of "Wire tapping" spurred prospects today of a full-scale inquiry into the practice of some government departments of recording telephone conversations with lawmakers and others.

Denunciations came from democratic as well as republican house leaders following the disclosure made at a senate war profits investigation earlier this week.

Speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Tex.) told newsmen of his great displeasure at such secret transcriptions and Republican leader Joe Martin (Mass.) termed them "A mean practice."

Consider Investigation

"I don't know why the bureaucrats should have more power on the telephone than the FBI," Martin added, noting that congress has condemned "Wire tapping" for criminal prosecution purposes.

Meanwhile, an influential member of the special house committee set up to investigate "executive agencies which exceed their authority" said that group is considering a thorough investigation.

The lawmakers' wrath was directed primarily at the war department, which turned over to the senate war investigating committee the record of a conversation between chairman May (D-Ky.) of the house military committee and an army ordnance officer in 1943.

Call General

Washington, July 5 (P)—Diggings deeper into circumstances under which an Illinois munitions combine received more than $78,000,000 in war contracts, the senate war investigating committee called in the army's wartime chief of ordnance today.

He is Maj. L. H. Campbell, Jr., whose name was brought into the inquiry earlier through the transcript of a telephone conversation between him and chairman May (D-Ky.) of the house military committee.

This transcript recorded May as asking Campbell to "jump on" the chief of the Chicago ordnance district in behalf of Dr. Henry M. Garson and associates, whose profits from their contracts have been denounced by chairman Mead (D-N.Y.) of the senate committee as "war profiteering at its worst."

Aboard U. S. S. Mt. McKinley, July 5 (P)—Vice Adm. W. H. P. Blandy today set July 25 as the tentative date for the detonation of Bikini's second atomic bomb, this one "an attack against hulls." It will be exploded slightly under the surface of the lagoon.

A full-dress rehearsal was scheduled for July 19.

The chief of Task Force One told newsmen he had scaled down his original estimates of a 100-foot tidal wave resulting from the sub-surface blast. The wave, he said, probably would be not more than 70 feet. This would be enough to send green water over Bikini Island.

Blandy expects some form of radioactive cloud to result from the spray blown up from the underwater explosion. Contamination of ships by the spray and by solid water tossed onto their decks is expected to be a factor in delaying their return for inspection.

The admiral in a reappraisal of the airborne drop termed it a "miss of appreciable dimensions" because of wind and other uncontrollable factors but asserted, however, that "nothing went wrong with this test to prevent it from being a complete success."

Pa. Society Adopts
New Major Objective

Harrisburg, Pa., July 5 (P)—Support of a national campaign to provide additional care for cerebral palsy has been adopted as a major objective of the Pennsylvania Society for Crippled Children.

Cerebral palsy, a form of paralysis resulting from injury to the motor areas of the brain, usually suffered at time of birth, afflicts about 300,000 persons in the United States, health statistics reveal. No adequately developed program for treatment of the affliction on a national scale now exists, according to leaders in the crippled children's movement.

Projects contemplated by the Pennsylvania Society for Crippled Children for expansion of its cerebral palsy program include establishment of nursery school centers for afflicted children, community workshops and rehabilitation centers, recreation service, summer camps and clinics.

The state society has also endorsed the six-point plan of the National Society for Crippled Children and adults aimed to insure the cerebral palsied health and medical care, social welfare and security, recreational, educational, and employment opportunities, and to foster and extend research in the care and prevention of this severe crippling condition.

Say Most Homes Are Built For Sale

Cleveland, July 5 (P)—Nearly 75 per cent of all new dwelling units in the fourth federal reserve district are single-family houses built chiefly for sale, the Federal Reserve bank of Cleveland reported today in its monthly business review.

Despite veterans' preference for low cost rental property, and the need for economy in use of building materials, only 10 per cent of the new dwelling units consists of apartments, the review stated.

The review also noted that houses for owner occupancy are also decided in the minority—"presumably because of high costs and the difficulty of obtaining materials of satisfactory quality." The fourth district include western Pennsylvania.

The human body includes 206 bones, held together and moved by 696 muscles.

Governor Martin Reluctant To Call Special Session Of State Legislature

BE CALLED NOW

Harrisburg, July 5 (AP)—Governor Martin, in the wake of Democratic demands for an immediate special session of the legislature to enact a state rent control law, was represented today as inclined to wait and see what Congress does about re-viving OPA.

"This is principally a federal matter and the governor is not going to be pressured into spending $500,000 of the taxpayers' money for piecemeal legislation which may be superseded by a general federal act," a high administration source, who declined direct attribution, told a reporter.

A special session would cost roughly about $500,000 if not prolonged, but the source pointed out with a political campaign opening up such a session could continue for a long period, piling up the cost, depending upon the amount of political maneuvering that would develop.

Rice Asks Special Term

For months Democratic leaders have been seeking a special session, without action from the governor, for legislation on veterans, housing and other reconversion problems.

With removal of federal rent control because of death of OPA, top Democratic leaders renewed their demand over the Independence Day holiday.

Col. John S. Rice, the Democratic nominee for governor, suggested to Martin in a letter that he "convene the legislature in special session immediately."

Democratic State Chairman J. Warren Mickie used stronger language in a statement he issued on the subject. Noting that the Democratic party "repeatedly" has asked for a special session, Mickie said:

"Now it demands such a session. It demands that session now, immediately, without any more delay, dodging excuses or alibis."

Governor Martin, at a news conference earlier in the week, said the commonwealth "will do everything in its power to prevent rent gouging" if the federal government fails to act but declined to comment directly on the question of a special session.

GOTHAM DEATH AND SHOOTING BEING LINKED

New York, July 5 (AP)—A patrolman who lay at the threshold of death today from a self-inflicted gunshot wound was formally under arrest on a homicide charge in the mysterious slaying of a middle-aged woman found dead of strangulation on a mid-Manhattan sidewalk.

Authorities still were unable to supply a motive in the bizarre case, involving Patrolman Marino Abello, 35, and a woman identified from papers in her purse as Katherine M. Miller, 42, a nurse, of Warren, Pa.

Police said there was no evidence to indicate the two were even acquainted, although they were linked circumstantially by a strange series of events.

"In Real Trouble"

The woman was found dead early yesterday on a First Avenue sidewalk near a damaged police car which Abello and a sergeant had been using while on duty. The sergeant related that he had left Abello alone in the car while he went to make an investigation and that when he returned both the car and patrolman were gone.

Later, Abello, who was traced to a West Side apartment through a relative, shot himself in the head as officers pleaded with him to come out of a room in which he had barricaded himself.

Before he was found in the apartment, police said, Abello stopped at his home and told his wife, the mother of his 11-year-old daughter, that "Tim is in real trouble and I have to do something serious about it." He then left.

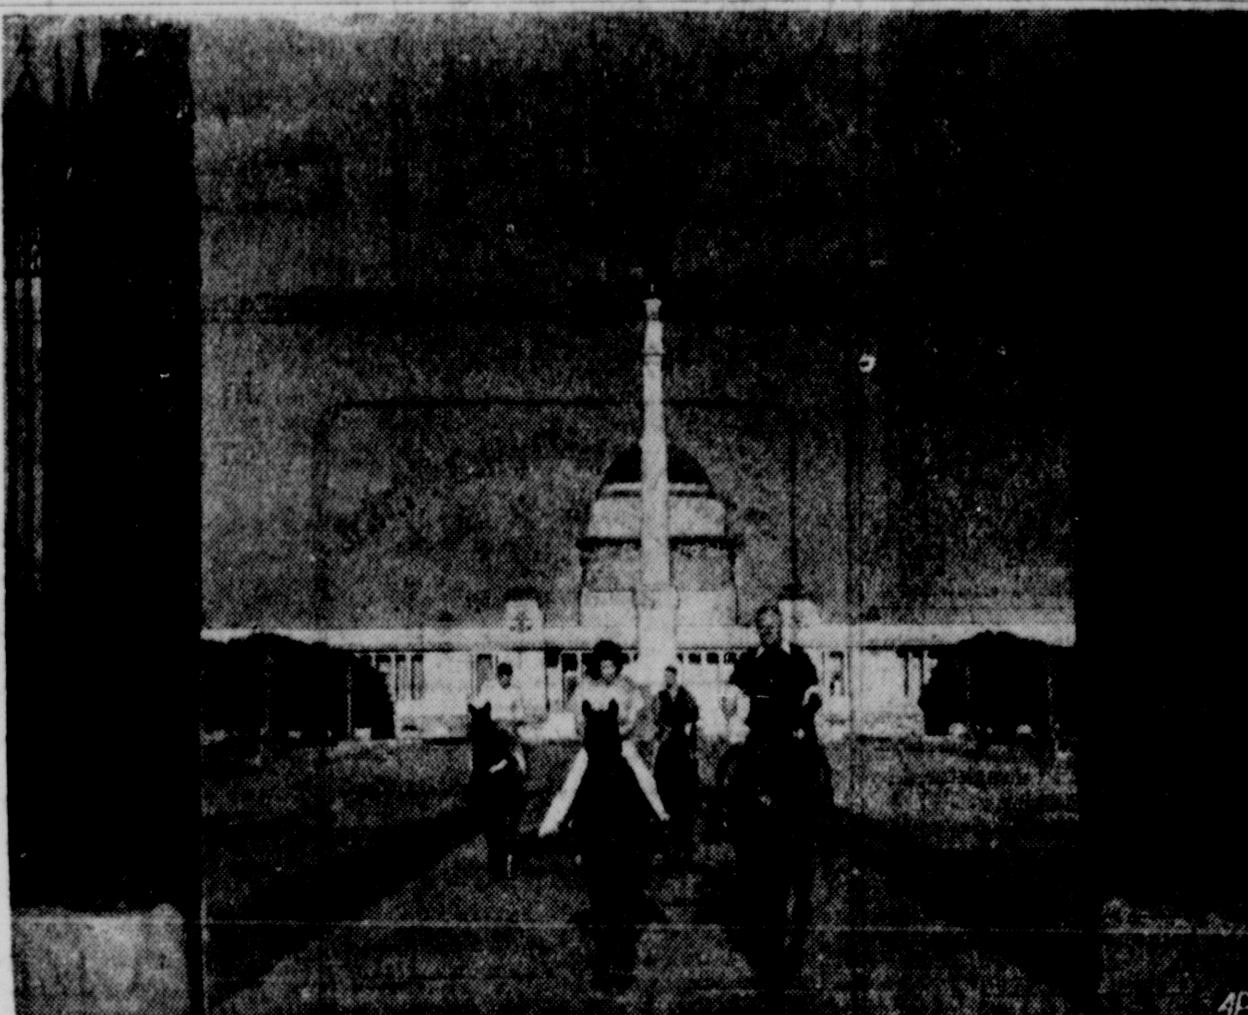

Commandeered Car

A bus driver told detective James Brady that a policeman had asked him to stay with the woman's body on First Avenue while the officer went to a police station. The driver said, however, that the officer commandeered a passing vehicle and drove instead in the opposite direction.

Frank Nielsen, whose car was commandeered, later told police that the patrolman pointed a pistol at his side and ordered him to drive to the Bronx, where he was forced out. The officer drove away and the car later was found abandoned.

Human Beings Need Phosphorus

Persons of all age groups must have an adequate supply of phosphorus in their food to promote normal brain functioning, growth of new tissues, building of strong bones and teeth, and proper digestion of foods, especially fats and starches.

Most farm and garden soils in the eastern part of the United States are seriously depleted in their phosphorus supply.

These two general facts are not happy ones to contemplate. Together they mean that all animals and persons who eat the foods produced from these phosphorus-deficient soils may suffer from retarded physical development, loss of weight, weakness, defective teeth and bones, rickets and perverted appetites.

Phosphorus cannot be manufactured in the soil. It must be added in the form of fertilizer. Fortunately, once it is applied, it is "fixed" in the soil and little of it descends below the root level or leaches out in drainage water. Thus, when the grower applies phosphate fertilizers he is quite certain that most of his investment will be returned in the crops harvested, whether directly or in the form of meats, milk, butter and similar products.

Of course, the benefits from phosphorus do not end with these important returns. It greatly improves plant vigor. It builds up resistance against many common plant diseases. It promotes development of bloom and seed and hastens maturity. It stiffens the straws of small grain crops and stimulates the natural growth of cover crops, legumes and grasses to crowd out obnoxious weeds.

The equivalent of approximately one million tons of 20 per cent acid phosphate is removed from the soils of the United States each year in crops consumed off the land. And too, every muddy creek and river carrying precious top soil from our land is carrying with it valuable loads of phosphorus. Perhaps few persons ever stop to consider the fact, but 1,250 gallons of milk take from the soil phosphorus equal to 100 pounds of superphosphate. Or $2\frac{1}{2}$ tons of alfalfa hay will remove about the same quantity. Likewise every six carloads of beef cattle shipped to stockyards take away as much phosphorus as is contained in the top of an average acre of farm land.

These drainage channels indicate why it is so important for farmers

Facts About Poultry Culling

May and June. This was based primarily on the need to save feeds, chiefly grains, in order to augment supplies of grain for relief of European and Asiatic peoples.

Commercial hatcheries report that during the first five months of the current year their output of chicks was 11 per cent below totals for the same months in 1945 while the number of eggs in commercial incubators on June 1 was 73 per cent below the number a year earlier. And the number of chicks booked for future delivery on June 1 was 83 per cent less than total orders on June 1, 1945.

These facts add up to a situation which should be discussed frankly with poultry owners.

With current bonus payments on wheat and corn to stimulate farm sales for relief export, pork and beef animals will likely be rushed to market during the next three or four months under weight and thereby contribute to further decreases in meat supplies next winter. With domestic shortages of most fats and vegetable oil continuing to grow more acute, our supplies of protein foods may conceivably reach an all-time low within the next six to ten months.

The poultryman may wisely inquire—Can we afford to reduce further our egg and broiler sources of proteins in the light of scarce animal meats and fats and vegetable oils?

Of course, no poultry owner at any time or any place can afford to keep and feed loafing, unprofitable hens. A hen that "eats her head off" is never profitable and has no place in well managed flocks. And it is certain she will prove less profitable while artificially sustained prices are maintained on grains to attract farmers to sell their supplies for foreign relief purposes. But it is extremely doubtful that any owner can afford to decimate his flock by selling off layers which promise a normal rate of egg production over the next year.

The government is still buying dried egg products for export. And while the reliable American hen has been keeping domestic egg supplies near consumer requirement levels, the inevitable result of too severe culling in the face of scarce meats growing scarcer and further deficits from an already deficit supply of fats and oils need not be doubted.

We shall need within the next year a more stable population of hens than present culling suggestions and hatchery performances indicate possible.

The editor is not opposed to relief of hunger in any foreign country. He joins all other American citizens in working for a justifiable sharing of plenty with those unfortunate who have nothing. But there is scarcely any logic in a proposition to transfer that penury from Europe and Asia to these shores in the name of international philanthropy. And the urging that our poultry owners continue to rid flock which are not by any means adequate at present numbers

JIGGER MORAN

By JOHN ROMBUTT

Chapter 20

A'hearn held his cigar like a club. His composure hung loosely like a man about to blow his top.

A decade of tabloid headlines about cops who went berserk with their service guns flooded Jigger's mind. He keyed his reflexes for a commando leap just in case.

"That cab blow-up that killed Pop Lynch, Jigger. Whaddaya know about it?"

"Not much. Hardly anything."

"That set-up was meant for you. It was your cab."

"It's possible."

"Did it have to do with the Herz case?"

"Search me."

"Why are you playing dumb?"

"Because I don't know anything for sure. It could have been a plant to eliminate me. A moth-eaten stunt?"

"Time bomb hooked on to the starter cable."

"Moth-eaten, my eye! I read the Bomb Squad's report. The gadget was up to the minute."

"You serious?"

Jigger's ineffable propriety of manner and tone lulled the savage beast. Some of the pomp of a guy with behind-the-scenes savvy crept into A'hearn's voice.

"Someone stuck a brand new sabotage device in your cab. It's called a 'cracker.' Looks like an ordinary spark plug and screws into the motor. Heat explodes it."

Jigger whistled thoughtfully.

A'hearn brandished the cigar. "I would light candles if it'd been you and not Pop Lynch in that cab."

Jigger grinned appreciatively.

"Maybe next time, A'hearn."

"There won't be a next time, Jigger. I'm serving notice on you that you're on your own from here on. The report on the 'cracker' is going to the FBI."

"You really think there's a Federal angle in this business, A'hearn?"

"I'm not letting you pump me, Jigger. All I can say is that according to Halloran of the Bomb Squad this same gadget has been used to sabotage planes during the war."

Jigger kept his eyes glued to A'hearn's un hand. "I need your help, A'hearn, to tie up some loose ends in this case."

There was a deadly silence. "It's probably the last demand I'll make on you, A'hearn. I'll either solve this Jig-saw or quit and spend my spare time as a volunteer apple-picker." A'hearn shifted his weight and Jigger's heart jumped crazily.

"I'll cut you in on the applause if I connect with the right answers." Jigger kept his eye on A'hearn's gun hand. It would be too, too sad if A'hearn's sanity was really in delicate balance. "I want to bait a trap for Little Joey—with your help since you're the keeper of the keys. Unfortunate as Pop Lynch's death was, it was an improvisation quite separate and apart from Joey and suggests things afoot beyond Joey's control." Jigger crooked a rhetorical arm. "A'hearn, I've been waiting for exactly just such an improvisation. It's a green light to probe some more. The racket angle was all blind alley."

There was a wee policeman's interest in A'hearn. "What kind of a trap do you want to set for Joey?"

Jigger wasn't entirely sure, but he concocted one with practically no hesitancy; and as it assembled into what sounded like a plan, he accepted it with A'hearn.

"I'm going to get Joey to admit that he was the guy who put Munsey into St. Vincent's Hospital. When he admits it, I'm going to tell him that you had a dictaphone connected with his cell with two witnesses on the other end and that Munsey died of his injuries last night. You see, Joey doesn't share your conviction that he's going to fry for the Herz and Birdie killings. I'm still in the dark about his actual reasons for hiring me, and Joey has told me practically nothing to date, even though I'm supposed to be working for him."

A'hearn asked, "What do you expect him to do when you spring the Munsey lie on him?"

"I'm hoping that with a death he's confessed guilt for, Joey might spill a few secrets he's been hoarding for what I've come to believe are some pretty desperate reasons. I'll tell him that he'll mitigate his sentence if he's of material aid in solving the other two deaths."

A'hearn scratched his head almost like his old self. "What did Joey bring you into the case in the first place for?"

"That, Cappie, is what I want to find out. There, no doubt, hangs a tale."

A'hearn named one condition: "After you do or don't get whatever you're after, you gotta promise not to tip Joey that you were framing him to get him to blab. He's gotta believe Munsey dead."

Poor Joey was in for a baking lamp and leadpipe affray.

"You want to sweat Joey with the victim at a psychological loss since he's supposed to have confessed to a murder, eh?"

A'hearn said stiffly that the third degree was verboten, out the window, a slander, like a station house captain on the witness stand in a citizen's inquiry into police brutality.

Jigger wondered how long it would take him to reconcile himself to the unpaid four-thousand-dollar balance that was virtually out the window.

A'hearn named a second condition with a note of triumph as he turned to leave: "There'll be a real dictaphone set-up in Joey's cell, Jigger. Just so you won't have too many lies on your conscience."

Jigger dignified A'hearn's departure with a pious Bronx cheer.

Chapter 21

Red's china-blue eyes blinked in the raw glare of the morning sun. Jigger was mopping up the goo of an omelette-once-over with a tear of white bread.

Red said, "Now what line of humor are you handing me?"

Jigger explained it: "I want her to feel trapped in her home. Afraid to venture out for fear of being trailed. Make her rely on synthetic communications utterly, particularly the mails."

Red said, "I don't get it."

"If she spies a sentry outside—and you'll make certain she does—she'll think her phone is tapped and won't use it. Telegraph is too public. Hence the mails for personal communication. What else?"

"So, it's the mails. Then what?"

"I am on my way to the P. O. to commit a small felony. I'm going to file a temporary change of address in the widow's name and get the widow's mail re-routed care of a three-dollar-a-month mail service which I've rented. Comprende vous?"

Red got it, but there was no agreement in his face. "I comprehend that I'll be passing cigarettes to you through a narrow slot in a Federal pen."

"I'll risk it, Red. Developments to date make me perishingly interested in the widow's mail bag. Of course, I may be wrong."

Jigger was a gent looking for balm in Gilead. "The P. O. brainstorm takes only about ten minutes, pal. I take it you plan to split the watch with me. I've got what's left of a private life to take care of—like taking a bath."

Jigger moved his head from side to side grimly. "No relief today, Red. If you get hungry, scare up a kid to run and get you a ham sandwich and a container of coffee. You must be omnipresent for the widow to get the idea."

Red inquired as a point of information, "Where you going, chief cheese?"

"I'm off to work a pressure hoax on Little Joey, with A'hearn aiding and abetting."

It was lame, lamebrain, and unconvincing. Jigger ended hopefully. "Even for sweet curiosity's sake, we ought to invest another couple of days. There's still a couple of hundred of the original grand left."

Red poked a disdaining fork in the meatless impurities Jigger had dished up: "Bunk, bunk, boloney! The only mating call you need is the cry of the golden eagle. You've been chasing the buck with the same fanatical virtuosity as the slumshocked. You'd have to be remade from scratch, boss, to work at anything without pay."

"If you're previewing lines of a play, Red—with me as acoustics—may I observe that your literary style is bush league."

Red yawned. "Oh yeah?" and beat his way back to the business of the day: "Where do I go from here?"

"To the Herz residence. Take up a fixed post outside. We should have done this from the beginning."

Rep. May Linked To Munitions Combine

Washington, July 5 (P)—Congressional search for the secret behind the swift wartime development of an Illinois munitions combine produced evidence Wednesday that its promoters got a helping hand from Rep. May (D-Ky.), chairman of the powerful House military committee.

The Senate war investigating committee disclosed a three-year old telephone conversation transcript quoting May as pressing the army to give more war orders to his "good friends"—a group of Illinois operators criticized by Chairman Mead (D-NY) for what he called "war profiteering."

"These fellows are good friends of mine and have been very kind to me in the past about some things and I want to help them if I could," May was quoted as saying.

"I'm not asking any favors for them. I just want them to get equal chances."

"I'm off to work a pressure hoax on Little Joey, with A'hearn aiding and abetting."

"What kind of pressure hoax?"

"Joey's going to tell me over again how he tortured Munsey. Then I'm going to relate sadly the news of Munsey's death. Dictaphones will record our friendly confab which same will also be told Little Joey in the proper sequence

O.P.A. Regulations Expired

Sunday Night

Whether or not O.P.A. was a good thing for the shopping public, only time will tell.

While O.P.A. regulations were law, Redding's did all in its power to conscientiously obey these regulations.

Not one penny's worth of black market goods was ever offered for sale by this store.

This may we say with pardonable pride.

—So much for the past.

Now that we are again trading in a free market, Redding's promise—and it is our pledge to you . . .

We will not take advantage of any opportunity to increase the normal conservative mark-up that we were granted under O.P.A.

We will continue to expend every effort to bring you the same high standard of merchandise you have learned to expect from this store—at the lowest possible price.

CITES HISTORY OF CONTROL OF WAR'S WEAPONS

By J. M. ROBERTS, Jr.
(AP Foreign Affairs Analyst)

A six-nation subcommittee assigned to draw up a charter for control of the atomic bomb has begun its work, with the United States agreeing in principle to ultimate surrender of its superiority in this field.

On August 11, 1921, the former Allies being then as now in search of peace, President Harding advised them that armaments were "a constant menace to the peace of the world rather than an assurance of its preservation," and invited them to meet in Washington to discuss disarmament. They came, and among other agreements reached was a five-power treaty limiting naval strength for 15 years.

Japan signed, but soon there were indications that she was interpreting the complicated limitations on tonnage, gunpowder and armament to suit herself. Britain and the United States, on the other hand, were anxious to avoid naval building expense.

U. S. Scrapped Ships

The United States actually scrapped real ships, as well as her shipbuilding program.

In 1930 the powers further agreed to withhold construction of some ships which would have been permitted between 1931 and 1936, and the Japanese were later suspected of some circumvention on this score, too, but the issue was never brought to a head. (It was only learned later, too late, that this circumvention was to play an important role in 1941-45.)

Then, in 1934, came renegotiation of the treaty. But it failed, and by 1937 the whole theory of naval limitation had fallen apart. The nations began to build, Japan at break-neck speed, scouring the world, including the United States, for materials. The U. S. building lag, however, was such that, when a new war broke out, she had few capital ships capable of operating with the recently-conceived aircraft carriers.

Conference Broke Up

Japan, though, had been building both capital ships and carriers, and converting cruisers into fast carriers. She had developed the art of sea-air warfare considerably beyond the point attained by the United States, which originated the idea but had let it lie comparatively dormant during the years when she observed both the letter and spirit of disarmament.

The London conference broke up on December 19, 1934, with a defy from Japan that she was well able to take care of herself.

On December 7, 1941, Japanese carrier-based planes sank eight U. S. battleships at Pearl Harbor.

The full atomic energy control commission meets today to consider rules of procedure.
